

MidLife Support for Women's Health Concerns

It's important to consult with these providers to understand the types of treatment they provide and if there are any limitations to their scope of practice. Some only offer hormone treatments in 'pellet' form, and this may not suit every person. Some offer nutrition, lifestyle, and supplemental treatments for those not appropriate for menopausal hormone therapy (MHT). Some offer aesthetics and anti-ageing treatments in a spa-like atmosphere. Be sure to ask plenty of questions about their training in hormone health and available treatments.

Online Resources for Integrative Medicine and Online Providers

A resource provided by the only Integrative Medicine MD in Pensacola who recently retired. This is a site where people can search for providers well-trained in hormone management and effective treatments to encourage healthy ageing.

WorldLinkMedical.com

This is a resource for providers and patients, so don't be overwhelmed. Scroll down to the bottom of the home page and use the link under "Support" for "Patient Education." The next page will have the link for "View the Provider Directory" in the middle of the page. You will need to enlarge the area covered in the search, as there are no options locally. (I provided two close ones above)

MidiHealth.com

This is an online service that offers telehealth and accepts insurance for the treatment of issues related to perimenopause & menopause, among other concerns. Dr. Mary Claire Haver, MD, recommended it, so it made the list.
